You are in a group chat with your classmates from the school volunteer club. You are planning a booth for the community festival.

Mika	Hi all! The festival committee says each club gets one table near the north gate. We need to decide what to do at our booth by Friday.
Leo	How about a used-book exchange? People bring one book and take one book. It costs nothing.
Hana	I like it, but last year the library club did something similar and lots of books were left over. Who would carry them home?
Mika	Good point. What if we only accept picture books? Families with small children usually come in the morning, and picture books are light.
Leo	Sure. And we could read a story aloud every hour to bring people to the table.
Hana	Count me in for the 10 a.m. and 11 a.m. readings. I have a dance performance at 1 p.m., so I can't stay after lunch.
Mika	Thanks! I'll make a poster tonight. Leo, can you ask Ms. Kato if we can borrow the big rug from the classroom so the kids can sit on the floor?
Leo	Will do. (thumbs-up)

問1　Why did Hana hesitate about Leo's first idea?　マーク 1

① It would cost the club too much money.
② Extra books might remain after the festival.
③ The library club had already chosen the same idea.
④ Families with children would not be interested.

問2　What did the group finally agree to do?　マーク 2

① Exchange any kind of used book and give away the rest.

You are reading an article written by a student for her school's English newsletter.

My First Night Market

Last spring, my family spent a week in Taichung, Taiwan, to visit my aunt. On our second evening she said, "You can't say you have been to Taiwan until you have tried a night market." I had imagined a small street with a few food stalls, but when we arrived I was surprised to see hundreds of lights stretching as far as I could see.

Before we went in, my aunt gave each of us a small paper card. "Write down three things you want to try," she said. "If you don't decide first, you will be full after ten minutes." I wrote "bubble tea," "grilled corn," and "something I have never heard of."

The first stall we visited sold bubble tea, and I could choose how sweet it was. I chose "half sugar," which my aunt said was what most local people order. Next, my brother wanted fried chicken, so we stood in a long line. While we were waiting, an old man next to us noticed my card and laughed. He pointed at the third item and said in English, "Then you must try stinky tofu."

Honestly, the smell almost made me run away. But I remembered my own words on the card, so I took one bite. It was crispy outside and soft inside, and the sauce was delicious. The man clapped and shouted something to the shop owner, who gave me an extra piece for free.

We never found grilled corn that night, because we were too full. Still, I learned that the best part of travelling is not checking items off a list, but being open to the surprises that the list leads you to.

問1　Why did the writer's aunt give her a paper card?　マーク 8

① To help her plan what to eat before getting full.
② To exchange it for free food at the market.
③ To write down the names of stalls she liked.
④ To show it to local people who spoke English.

問2　Put the following events into the order in which they happened. (Choose four of the five.)　マーク 9〜12

① The writer chose a less sweet drink.
② The writer was given an extra piece of food.
③ The writer bought grilled corn.
④ The family waited in line for fried chicken.
⑤ A stranger suggested a dish to the writer.

問3　What is the main message of the article?　マーク 13

① You should always follow a plan when travelling.
② Local food is better than food in your own country.
③ A plan is useful, but unexpected experiences matter more.
④ You need to speak the local language to enjoy travelling.

第3問 解答・解説　9点満点

問1 正解 ①　(3点)
根拠 "If you don't decide first, you will be full after ten minutes."（先に決めないと10分で満腹になる）
ほかの選択肢 ② 無料でもらったのはおじさんのおかげ。③ 書いたのは「食べたいもの」で店名ではない。④ カードに気づいたのはおじさんの方で、見せるためのものではない。

問2 正解 ① → ④ → ⑤ → ②　(3点)

入れないもの ③ "We never found grilled corn that night"
なので起きていない。5つから4つを選ぶ形式は「起きていない出来事」が1つ混ざる。
配点 完答で3点（本番も並べ替えは全部合って得点）。

問3 正解 ③　(3点)
根拠 最終段落 "the best part of travelling is not checking items off a list, but being open to the surprises that the list leads you to."
構文 not A but B（A ではなく B）で筆者の主張は B 側。リストは「驚きに導くもの」として役に立ったので、計画そのものを否定してはいない（①×）。

stretch	広がる
crispy	カリッとした

You are a member of the school newspaper team. Your classmate Daichi wrote the draft below, and your teacher left comments. Help him improve it.

Draft: Why Our School Should Start a "No-Phone Lunch"

(1) Many students look at their phones during lunch. In a survey of 200 students in our school, 72% said they use their phones "almost every day" while eating. (2) _____ I believe our school should try a "No-Phone Lunch" one day a week.

(3) First, eating without phones helps us talk with friends. When everyone is looking at a screen, the cafeteria becomes strangely quiet. (4) My cousin's school in Osaka started a similar rule last year, and students there say they made new friends from other classes.

(5) Second, it is good for our health. Some studies show that people eat more slowly and feel full sooner when they are not distracted. (6) My favourite lunch is curry rice, which the cafeteria serves on Wednesdays.

(7) Some students may say that they need their phones in case of an emergency. _____ (8) Teachers can be contacted at any time, and the rule would apply only during the 40-minute lunch break.

Teacher's comments: A) Add a sentence that connects the survey to your opinion in (2). B) One sentence in the third paragraph does not support your point. Remove it. C) Add a sentence after (7) that responds to the opposing view. D) Choose a better title.

The Clock Shop on Hill Street

Every day after school, Ren walked past the old clock shop on Hill Street. Its window was full of clocks, and none of them showed the same time. Ren thought it was strange, even a little silly. Why would a clock shop not fix its own clocks?

One rainy afternoon in October, Ren's grandfather's watch stopped. It was a silver watch with a crack in the glass, and Grandpa had worn it every day for fifty years. Since Grandpa had gone into hospital the week before, Ren had been keeping it in his bag. When he noticed it had stopped, he felt as if something bad had happened. Without thinking, he opened the door of the clock shop.

Inside, an old woman with round glasses was working at a desk. "It's my grandfather's," Ren said, putting the watch down. She opened the back carefully and looked at it for a long time. "This needs a new spring," she said. "I can order one, but it will take three weeks." Ren's heart sank. Three weeks felt too long.

Seeing his face, the woman pointed at the window. "Do you know why those clocks all show different times?" Ren shook his head. "Each one shows the time in a city where one of my customers lives now. That one is Toronto, where a girl who used to come here every Saturday moved. That one is Nairobi." She smiled. "When I look at them, I remember that people are living their own lives in their own time, even when they are far away."

Ren visited the shop every week after that. He learned how to clean small gears with a brush and how to listen to the sound of a watch to find problems. When the spring finally arrived, the woman let him put it in himself. The watch began to tick, and Ren laughed out loud.

That evening he took the watch to the hospital. Grandpa was sitting up in bed, looking much better. Ren set the watch to the correct time and put it on Grandpa's wrist. "It's running again," Grandpa said quietly. "So am I." The next morning, Ren stopped at the clock shop and asked the woman if she had space for one more clock in her window — one set to the time in the hospital room, which was, of course, the same as Hill Street. "Then it will be the only clock that tells the right time," she said, and they both laughed.

Why Do We Forget — and Is It Bad?

[1] Most of us think of forgetting as a failure. We forget names, passwords, and where we parked the car, and we wish our memories were more like computers. However, a growing number of researchers argue that forgetting is not simply a weakness of the brain but an important part of how memory works.

[2] In the 1880s, the German psychologist Hermann Ebbinghaus tested himself by learning lists of meaningless syllables and checking how many he could remember later. He found that memory drops quickly at first: within a day, more than half of the information was lost. After that, the speed of forgetting slowed down. This pattern, known as the "forgetting curve," has been confirmed many times since.

[3] Ebbinghaus also discovered how to fight the curve. When he reviewed a list again after some time had passed, he needed fewer attempts to learn it, and the information stayed longer. Today this is called "spaced repetition." Reviewing material at increasing intervals — for example, after one day, three days, and then a week — is far more effective than reviewing it many times in one night.

[4] Why, then, does the brain forget at all? One answer is efficiency. Every day we receive huge amounts of information, most of which we will never need again. If the brain kept everything, finding useful memories would be like searching for a book in a library where nothing is ever thrown away. By letting unused information fade, the brain makes important memories easier to reach.

[5] Forgetting may also help us adapt. Imagine a bird that remembers exactly where it found food last winter. If the food is no longer there, a perfect memory could actually be a disadvantage; a bird that forgets old details is more likely to search new places. Similarly, people who can let go of outdated information may make better decisions in a changing world.

[6] This does not mean we should stop trying to remember. Rather, it suggests that we should work with the brain's natural tendencies. Sleep, for example, plays a key role: during sleep the brain strengthens memories that were used during the day. Students who sleep well after studying usually remember more than those who stay up all night. Testing yourself, instead of simply rereading notes, also sends a strong signal that the information matters.

[7] In short, forgetting is less a bug than a feature. Understanding how it works allows us to remember what really counts.

第8問 複数の意見と資料（レポートのアウトライン作成）

第1回 ／ 7マーク・17点・目標13分

特徴と解き方：複数の意見から「立場の根拠」を選ぶ

・5人の意見＋資料から、自分の立場のレポートを3ステップで組み立てる。配点が最大（17点）。
・ステップ1：各人を「賛成／条件つき／反対」に分類。ステップ2：同じ立場の2人の共通点（空所すべて正解で得点）。ステップ3：資料から根拠を2つ。
・データは「主張のどこを支えるか」で選ぶ（ただの事実・調査の規模は根拠にならない）。目標13分。

You are writing a report on the question: "Should high schools allow students to use AI tools for homework?" You read opinions from five people and some data, then complete an outline.

Step 1: Opinions

Ms. Wood (English teacher)	AI can give quick feedback on grammar, which I cannot do for 40 students every night. But if students let AI write whole essays, they will never learn to organise their own ideas. Homework should be designed so that AI helps with checking, not thinking.
Taro (high school student)	I use an AI tool to explain maths problems I can't solve. It is like having a patient tutor at home. My family cannot afford a cram school, so banning AI would be unfair to students like me.
Dr. Ahmed (education researcher)	Our studies show that students who used AI only after trying a problem themselves improved more than those who asked AI first. The timing of AI use matters more than whether it is allowed.
Mr. Clark (parent)	My daughter finishes her homework in ten minutes now. I am worried she is copying answers. Schools should ban AI tools for homework until there are clear rules.
Yuna (university student)	At university we are expected to use AI responsibly and say when we used it. If high schools ban it completely, students will not learn these skills before they need them.

Step 3: Data

Survey of 500 high school students (2026)	%
Have used AI for homework at least once	78
Used AI mainly to check or explain answers	46
Used AI mainly to produce answers to copy	22
Said their school has clear rules on AI	19

問1　マーク 38

Step 1: Who is clearly AGAINST allowing AI tools for homework at present?

① Ms. Wood　② Taro　③ Dr. Ahmed　④ Mr. Clark

問2　マーク 39

Step 1: Both Ms. Wood and Dr. Ahmed suggest that _____.

① AI should be banned in all schools
② how AI is used is more important than simply allowing or banning it
③ students should use AI before trying problems themselves
④ parents should check their children's homework

問3　マーク 40〜41

Step 2: You take the position that AI should be ALLOWED with rules. Choose the two people who best support you, and the point they share. (Choose one from each group.)

① (A) Taro and Yuna / Ms. Wood and Mr. Clark / Dr. Ahmed and Mr. Clark
② (B) Using AI prepares students for the future and gives fair support.
③ (B) AI makes homework faster to finish.
④ (B) Teachers will no longer need to check homework.

問4　Step 3: Choose TWO pieces of data that best support your position "Allow AI, but make clear rules." (The order does not matter.)　マーク 42〜43

① 78% have used AI for homework at least once.
② 46% used AI mainly to check or explain answers.
③ 22% used AI mainly to copy answers.
④ 19% said their school has clear rules.
⑤ The survey included 500 students.

問5　Step 3: Which conclusion best completes your outline?　マーク 44

① AI tools should be banned until students stop copying.
② Schools should allow AI tools and teach students when and how to use them honestly.
③ Students should be free to use AI in any way they like.
④ Only university students should use AI tools.

第8問 解答・解説　17点満点

問1 正解 ④ （2点）
根拠 Mr. Clark "Schools should ban AI tools for homework until there are clear rules."
ほかの選択肢 Ms. Wood は「確認に使うなら良い」という条件つき賛成。Taro・Yuna は賛成。Dr. Ahmed は「使う時機が大事」で禁止には触れていない。

問2 正解 ② （3点）
根拠 Ms. Wood「考えるためではなく確認のために」、Dr. Ahmed「許可するかより使うタイミング」。どちらも「使い方」を重視。
ほかの選択肢 ③ Dr. Ahmed の研究と逆。

問3 正解（A）Taro and Yuna（B）1つ目の文（将来への準備・公平な支援） （4点）
根拠
Taro：塾に行けない生徒にとって公平な支援。Yuna：大学で必要な責任ある使い方を身につける。2人とも「認めるべき」。
ほかの組 Ms. Wood と Mr. Clark は立場が違う。Dr. Ahmed は禁止反対とも言っていない。
配点 本番のステップ2は空所すべて正解で得点（ここでは4点）。

問4 正解 ②・④ （4点）
根拠 ② 半数近くはすでに「確認・説明」というよい使い方をしている → 認める根拠。④ ルールがあると答えたのは19%だけ → 「ルールを作るべき」の根拠。
ほかの選択肢 ① 使っている事実だけで賛否の根拠にならない。③ はむしろ禁止派の根拠。⑤ 調査の規模で、主張の根拠ではない。
考え方
第8問は「自分の立場を支える根拠」を選ぶ。数字そのものではなく、その数字が主張の「どこ」を支えるかを考える。

問5 正解 ② （4点）
根拠 立場（ルールつきで認める）＋ Ms. Wood・Dr. Ahmed・Yuna の「使い方・時機・責任」をまとめた結論。① ④ は立場と逆、③ は「ルール」を欠く。
