予 想 問 題　第 3 回

前 期 日 程　対 策

英 語 問 題

大阪大学（外国語学部以外）の出題形式に準拠 ／ 問題

注　意

1. 問題部分と解答用紙で構成されている（問題部分 1〜7ページ・解答用紙 8〜9ページ）。答えは解答用紙の決められた欄に書くこと。
2. 試験時間の目安は90分（文学部の志願者は105分）。大問は I〜IV の4題。
3. IV(B)は，文学部志望なら(イ)，それ以外の学部志望なら(ロ)に答えること。
4. 配点は I 30点・II 50点・III 30点・IV 40点（計150点）。本予想問題が独自に定めた配点である。
5. 本冊子の英文・日本文・設問はすべてオリジナルである。

大阪大学の過去問・公式問題ではありません。予想問題であり，大学とは関係がありません。
本冊子は過去の出題形式を分析して作成した練習用の教材です。

I 英文和訳（配点 30点）

英文(A)・(B)の下線部を，それぞれ和訳しなさい。

(A) Imagine a game of football in which players could pick up the ball, ignore the boundaries, and score whenever they liked. It would hardly be a game at all. The rules that seem to restrict players are in fact what give their actions meaning: a goal is exciting only because it was difficult to score within limits that everyone has agreed to accept. In this respect, games remind us that freedom and constraint are not always opposites, and that a challenge we choose for ourselves can bring pleasure rather than frustration.

(B) Every translator knows the temptation to explain. When a word in the original has no exact equivalent, it seems kind to add a phrase that tells the reader what it means. But a translation that explains everything can end up less faithful than one that leaves some strangeness in place, for part of what a foreign text offers is precisely the experience of meeting a way of thinking that does not fit our own. To smooth away every difficulty is to deny readers the chance to make that effort themselves.

II 長文読解（配点 50点）

英文を読み，後の設問(1)〜(6)に答えなさい。

The Uses of Boredom

Few states of mind are as widely disliked as boredom. We associate it with waiting rooms, delayed trains, and afternoons that seem to stretch on without end, and we go to considerable lengths to avoid it. Today the effort required is smaller than ever. The moment a gap appears in the day, whether in a queue at the post office or during a pause in conversation, most of us reach for a device that promises to fill it with news, messages, or games. Whole weeks can now pass without our enduring more than a few minutes of genuine (i)tedium.

Such efficiency might seem an unqualified blessing. Boredom, after all, has rarely enjoyed a good reputation. Moralists of earlier centuries regarded idleness as a doorway to vice, and more recent commentators have treated restlessness as a symptom of shallow minds or of a culture that has lost its sense of purpose. (1)Yet a growing number of writers have begun to ask whether, in banishing boredom so thoroughly, we may have discarded something of value.

To see what that might be, it helps to consider what boredom actually is. It is not simply the absence of anything to do; a person can be bored in the middle of a busy day filled with routine chores. Rather, it is the uncomfortable awareness that our attention has nothing worth holding on to, that the activity in front of us fails to engage the capacities we would like to use. In this sense boredom resembles hunger or pain. It is an unpleasant feeling whose function is to tell us that something needs to change. (A)Like those signals, it can be silenced without being answered.

When the signal is heeded rather than (ii)suppressed, the results can be surprising. A child left without entertainment on a rainy afternoon may complain for an hour and then invent an elaborate game with cardboard boxes and a torch. An adult stuck on a long journey with a dead phone battery may find her thoughts drifting toward a problem at work, or toward a plan she had set aside years ago. In such moments the mind, deprived of outside stimulation, turns to its own resources. Many people say that their most original ideas arrive not while they are concentrating hard but while they are walking, washing dishes, or gazing out of a window. These are activities that demand just enough attention to keep restlessness at bay while leaving the imagination free to wander.

It would be a mistake, however, to romanticize boredom. Chronic boredom, the kind that comes from years of work offering no scope for skill or judgment, is (iii)corrosive rather than fertile, and it can lead to misery and recklessness rather than to insight. Nor is the daydreaming that boredom encourages always pleasant. Left to themselves, some minds drift not toward inventive possibilities but toward worries and regrets, and the habit of brooding can be as hard to escape as the dullness that produced it. (2)What seems to matter is not boredom itself but what we do with it: whether we treat it as an invitation to look for something more deserving of our attention, or merely as an itch to be scratched as quickly as possible.

This is where the constant availability of distraction becomes a concern. A smartphone does not merely relieve boredom; it relieves it so swiftly and so reliably that the feeling never has a chance to do its work. (B)Each time we reach for the screen at the first flicker of restlessness, we teach ourselves that the discomfort is intolerable and must be ended at once. Over time, the point at which we begin to feel bored may come sooner, so that even brief pauses become difficult to bear. Meanwhile the habit of turning inward, of letting a thought unfold slowly, may grow (iv)feeble from lack of use.

Some teachers and parents have responded by deliberately leaving room for unstructured time, such as afternoons with nothing scheduled or journeys without screens. They do so not because idleness is good in itself, but because the ability to tolerate a little emptiness seems to be a precondition for many worthwhile pursuits: reading a difficult book, practicing an instrument, or thinking through a problem that has no quick solution. (3)Each of these requires us to stay with an activity through stretches that are not immediately rewarding. Someone who has never learned to sit with mild discomfort may abandon such pursuits long before they begin to pay off.

(C)Boredom, then, may be best understood not as an enemy to be defeated but as a messenger to be heard. Its message is seldom welcome, for it tells us that the present moment falls short of what we want from it. But to (v)dismiss the messenger at once is to lose the chance of discovering what we want instead. The next time a train is delayed and the phone lies within reach, it may be worth waiting a few minutes before picking it up, simply to see where the mind goes when it is given nowhere else to go.

設問(1)　下線部(i)〜(v)の語がこの文章で表している意味として，最もふさわしいものを(イ)〜(ニ)からそれぞれ1つ選び，記号で答えなさい。

(i) tedium

（イ）excitement　（ロ）dullness　（ハ）confusion　（ニ）loneliness

(ii) suppressed

（イ）obeyed　（ロ）examined　（ハ）misread　（ニ）held back

(iii) corrosive

（イ）damaging　（ロ）productive　（ハ）temporary　（ニ）familiar

(iv) feeble

（イ）strange　（ロ）rigid　（ハ）weak　（ニ）noisy

(v) dismiss

（イ）welcome　（ロ）send away　（ハ）imitate　（ニ）obey

設問(2)　下線部(A)〜(C)について英語で問う。それぞれの問いに対する答えとしてふさわしいものを(イ)〜(ニ)から1つずつ選び，記号で答えなさい。

(A) Like those signals, it can be silenced without being answered.

What does the author mean by this?

（イ） Boredom always disappears by itself if we simply wait long enough.
（ロ） Boredom is as painful as hunger and should be treated by a doctor.
（ハ） We can stop feeling bored without dealing with the need it points to.
（ニ） Boredom is a signal that other people send when they want our attention.

(B) Each time we reach for the screen at the first flicker of restlessness, we teach ourselves that the discomfort is intolerable and must be ended at once.

According to the author, what is the result of this habit?

（イ） We come to feel that even mild boredom cannot be endured.
（ロ） We learn to use our phones more efficiently for work and study.
（ハ） We become better at noticing the moment when boredom begins.
（ニ） We gradually lose interest in our phones and turn to other activities.

(C) Boredom, then, may be best understood not as an enemy to be defeated but as a messenger to be heard.

What does the author suggest here?

（イ） We should try to remain bored for as long as possible every day.
（ロ） Only people with shallow minds ever experience real boredom.
（ハ） Phones should be designed to prevent boredom more effectively.
（ニ） We should listen to what boredom tells us instead of ending it at once.

設問(3)　下線部(1)の something of value とは，退屈のどのような働きを指すか。第4段落に基づいて45字以内で説明しなさい（句読点も1字と数える）。

設問(4)　下線部(2)を，内容がよく伝わるように和訳しなさい。

設問(5)　下線部(3) Each of these requires us to stay with an activity through stretches that are not immediately rewarding. とはどういうことか。these が指すものを明らかにし，それが退屈に耐える力とどう関係するかを含めて，英語40〜50語程度で説明しなさい。

設問(6)　本文の内容に一致するものを(イ)〜(ヘ)の中から2つ選んで，その記号を書きなさい（順序は問わない）。

（イ）筆者は，退屈を感じるのは何もすることがないときに限られると述べている。
（ロ）筆者は，長年続く慢性的な退屈も，創造性を生む源になると考えている。
（ハ）雨の午後に遊び道具のない子どもが，しばらく不満を言った後で手の込んだ遊びを考え出すことがある。
（ニ）退屈によって生じる空想は，常に楽しいものだと筆者は述べている。
（ホ）筆者は，子どもには一切の電子機器を使わせるべきではないと主張している。
（ヘ）難しい本を読むことや楽器の練習には，すぐには報われない時間に耐える力が必要だと筆者は考えている。

III　自由英作文（配点 30点）

大学生が在学中に身につけるべき力として，あなたが最も大切だと考えるものを1つ挙げ，なぜそう考えるのかを，自分なりの具体例を含めて英語80語程度で述べなさい。ただし，特定の資格や外国語の能力は除くこと。

IV　和文英訳（配点 40点）

日本文(A)・(B)の下線部を英訳しなさい。(B)は，文学部を志望する人は(イ)，それ以外の学部を志望する人は(ロ)に答えること（本予想問題では，志望と異なる側を選んだ答案は採点しない扱いとする）。

(A)（全員）

便利な道具は，私たちの手間を省いてくれる代わりに，ときに私たちから何かを奪っていく。地図アプリに道案内を任せるようになってから，初めての町でも迷うことはほとんどなくなった。その反面，どの角を曲がったのか，途中にどんな店があったのかを後から思い出せないことが増えた気がする。目的地に早く着くことと，その町を知ることとは，どうやら別のことらしい。

(B)

(イ)（文学部志望）

祖母の家の台所には，使い込まれて黒光りする木のまな板があった。子どものころ，その上で野菜を刻む音を聞きながら，宿題をするふりをしてぼんやりしているのが好きだった。あの規則正しい音には，言葉で励まされるよりもずっと心を落ち着かせる力があったように思う。祖母が亡くなって何年もたつが，今でも台所に立つと，ふとあの音が聞こえてくる気がする。

(ロ)（文学部以外の学部志望）

新しい薬の効果を確かめる試験では，患者を二つの組に分け，一方には本物の薬を，もう一方には見た目が同じで有効成分を含まない錠剤を与えることが多い。これは，薬を飲んだという安心感だけで症状が軽くなる場合があるからだ。両方の組を比べてはじめて，薬そのものがどれほど効いたのかを見極めることができる。しかも，誰がどちらを飲んでいるのかを医師にも知らせないでおくことで，判断に先入観が入り込むのを防いでいる。

解答用紙　予想問題 第3回

受験番号・氏名欄は省略。記号は (イ) のように書く。

I

(A)

(B)

II

設問(1)　(i) [　　]　(ii) [　　]　(iii) [　　]　(iv) [　　]　(v) [　　]

設問(2)　(A) [　　]　(B) [　　]　(C) [　　]

設問(3)

45字（20字×3行，10字ごとに太線）

設問(4)

20語

設問(5)

40語

設問(6)　[　　]　[　　]

解答用紙（III・IV）

III（80語程度）

20語

40語

60語

80語

100語

IV (A)

IV (B)　選択した問題に○：　(イ)　・　(ロ)

奥付

予想問題 第3回　英語　問題

対象：大阪大学 前期日程 英語（外国語学部以外）の受験準備

作成：学習アプリ マナトビ 編集部（2026年10月）

作成方法：2022〜2026年度の出題形式・語数・難易度を分析し，英文・日本文・設問をすべて新たに書き下ろした。

> 大阪大学の過去問・公式問題ではありません。予想問題であり，大学とは関係がありません。

本冊子の英文・日本文は実在の記事・書籍・論文からの引用・翻案ではありません。無断転載・再配布を禁じます。

